

2012

Deference to the Executive in the United States after September 11: Congress, the Courts, and the Office of Legal Counsel

Summary

According to the "deference thesis," legislatures, courts, and other government institutions should defer to the executive's policy decisions during national security emergencies. The essay addresses two criticisms of the deference thesis.

To view this article in its entirety please use the link provided below.

View Full Article

Recommended Citation

Eric Posner, "Deference to the Executive in the United States after September 11: Congress, the Courts, and the Office of Legal Counsel," 35 Harvard Journal of Law and Public Policy 213 (2012).