CONSENT ORDER FOR A CIVIL MONEY PENALTY

The Comptroller of the Currency of the United States of America (“Comptroller”), through his national bank examiners and other staff of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (“OCC”), has conducted examinations of JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A., Columbus, Ohio (“Bank”). The OCC has identified deficiencies in the Bank’s trading oversight practices that resulted in losses of more than $6 billion, and has informed the Bank of the findings resulting from the examinations.

The Bank, by and through its duly elected and acting Board of Directors, has executed a Stipulation and Consent to the Issuance of an Order for a Civil Money Penalty, dated September 18, 2013, that is accepted by the Comptroller (“Stipulation”). By this Stipulation, which is incorporated herein by reference, the Bank has consented to the issuance of this Consent Order for a Civil Money Penalty (“Order”) by the Comptroller. The Bank has committed to taking necessary and appropriate steps to remedy the deficiencies, unsafe and unsound practices and violations of law or regulation identified by the OCC, and has begun implementing procedures to remediate the practices addressed in this Order.

ARTICLE I

COMPTROLLER'S FINDINGS

The Comptroller finds the following:

(1) The Chief Investment Office ("CIO") conducted various trades on behalf of the Bank.

(2) Some of these trades involved a credit derivatives trading strategy.

(3) During the first quarter of 2012, the CIO's credit derivatives trading strategy significantly increased the CIO's risk as measured by the Bank's Value at Risk ("VaR") model. This increase in risk resulted in breaches of certain limits established for the CIO.

(4) During this period, the Bank implemented a new VaR model, which had the effect of significantly reducing the CIO's VaR measurement. While the process for measuring VaR changed, the VaR limits established under the previous model were retained. As a result, the CIO continued to increase its risk without continuing to exceed the VaR limits.

(5) During this period, the CIO's credit derivatives trading strategy began to suffer substantial losses, and additional risk limits were breached.

(6) During this period, the CIO substantially increased the size of its credit derivatives positions. The Bank's risk controls failed, and reporting was not adequate. The CIO was able to increase its positions and risk, and ultimately losses, without sufficiently effective intervention by the Bank's control groups.

(7) During the second quarter 2012, the CIO's credit derivatives trading strategy suffered additional substantial losses.

(8) To the present, losses attributable to the CIO's credit derivatives trading strategy have exceeded $6 billion.

(9) The OCC has engaged in several targeted examinations of the Bank and the CIO. The OCC's examination findings establish that the Bank had deficiencies in its internal controls and engaged in unsafe or unsound banking practices and violations of 12 C.F.R. Part 3, Appendix B (Market Risk Management Amendment) with respect to the credit derivatives trading strategies, activities and positions employed by the CIO on behalf of the Bank. The deficiencies and unsafe and unsound practices include the following:

- (a) The Bank's oversight and governance of the credit derivatives trading conducted by the CIO were inadequate to protect the Bank from material risks in those trading strategies, activities and positions;
- (b) The Bank's risk management processes and procedures for the credit derivatives trading conducted by the CIO did not provide an adequate foundation to identify, understand, measure, monitor and control risk;
- (c) The Bank's valuation control processes and procedures for the credit derivatives trading conducted by the CIO were insufficient to provide a rigorous and effective assessment of valuation;
- (d) The Bank's internal audit processes and procedures related to the credit derivatives trading conducted by the CIO were not effective; and

(e) The Bank's model risk management practices and procedures were inadequate to provide adequate controls over certain of the Bank's market risk and price risk models.

(10) The credit derivatives trading activity constituted recklessly unsafe and unsound practices, was part of a pattern of misconduct and resulted in more than minimal loss, all within the meaning of 12 U.S.C. § 1818(i)(2)(B).

(11) The Bank failed to ensure that significant information related to the credit derivatives trading strategy and deficiencies identified in risk management systems and controls was provided in a timely and appropriate manner to OCC examiners.
